TO-DAY'S INAUGURATION.

President Roca will inaugurate to-day the National School edifices in this city, and if the weather permits, the ceremony will be surrounded with all the pomp and circumstance that the occasion calls for. Most of these National Schoolhouses are extravagantly grand, and hemispherically separated from the humble public school which our immortal Goldsmith, one hundred years ago, inaugurated. We believe it, and we say it, that in no other country under the Sun is there more public money spent on public education than this. It may be a matter of pride to some, or of humiliation to others, that the National revenue should spend such millions in teaching the young idea how to shoot, but the fact stands, we beat all South America hollow in our Educational Department, and we are not quite sure but that we also lick Europe and the great U. States in the premises. But with all our scholastic expenditure our schools are in our towns, we have no country schools, and unless a recent proposal for visiting schoolmasters be adopted by the education board, we cannot see the hope of our learning reaching the young children in the camp, who after all should be the very first to be looked after. The vain transitory splendour of these National Schoolhouses to be inaugurated to-day contrasts the stronger with the Egyptian darkness of the poor native families in the camp, and we want in this province at least camp-schools more than palatial educational halls. Beside the San Miguel Church there is a grand schoolhouse fitted up with such show and magnificence that it looks more like one of our private banks than the noisy mansion of the parish schoolmaster. This building will be inaugurated to-day with champagne and learning; the liquor, we have no doubt, will be splendid, it will give genius a better discerning.

We have boys and girls growing up in the camp without one spark of education, and only at the "ranchos" of the farmers, who are able to afford the expense of a master, is the rising camp generation taught anything. Owing to the sparse population, and the distances of the "puestos" and houses, this question of camp schools is surrounded with great difficulty, a difficulty which we fully appreciate and which we only point to now, that, in the midst of this grandiose ceremony of inaugurating bricks and mortar, some pious friend will lift his voice for the poor children in the camp—as something should be done for them. We want campschools and camp schoolmasters in every 'partido,' in every 'cuartel' in the country, and although to-day's ceremony speaks much for the rank of intellect and the march of mind amongst us, still there is a good deal of superfluous pomp and masquerade in all this educational show, and if less of the public money was spent on the town and more on the camp, we should find the boys and girls in the camp able to read and write, and cypher too. Mr. Latzina has just published some interesting extracts from the new Educational Census just taken; his figures with respect to the Upper Provinces fully bear out our remarks. The following shows the number of children in each proving eligible for school from 5 to 14 years:

		At School.
San Luis.....	20,179	5,129
San Juan.....	16,522	5,427
Catamarca....	20,823	3,269
Tucuman.....	32,302	6,322

These figures clearly show that only the children in the towns go to school. We have no returns for Buenos Aires, but we are aware that when published the disparity will be still greater. If we all therefore drink deep at to-day's inauguration, and make speeches of learned length and thundering sound, let us not be carried away with our genius, our grammar, and learning. The camp children have claims, and it is our interest that those claims should have representation, and be no longer consigned by the Minister to sweet oblivion.

THE AUSTRALIAN CENSUS.

Of all the new countries none have been more puffed up than Australia. Offices in London, agents in all the principal cities, lectures and pamphlets and leading articles to foment emigration; no art has been untried to push Australia ahead. Capital has flown into that country so fast that it has ceased to be the land it once was for the poor man, and millionaires have bought up the lands and established sheep stations over the whole colony. The difference between Australia and the Plate is that, whilst the first has been too much puffed up, the latter has not been puffed at all. A man may walk through the whole city of London without finding even in the very best society one who knows where Bahia Blanca is, or whether B. Aires is in Brazil or not. Now that distinguished visitors are coming to this country, they many of them rub their eyes when they see the movement going on in our streets, and ask themselves how is it possible that people at home know so little about a place of such business, trade, traffic and commerce. We for our part have been toiling with book and pen for the last 22 years to make the country known favorably abroad, and have passed the best years of a lifetime in inducing men of capital to invest out here in preference to any other of what are termed the new countries; but spite of all our teaching, Australia and New Zealand have for ever held a preference over the Plate, simply because they were British colonies. This colonial prejudice is, however, now broken down, and we find not only English capitalists coming out to have a look at the country by every steamer, but actually Australians themselves are visiting us and we hope that everything will facilitate their permanence amongst us; as we could not possibly have a better class of settlers than the Australian, whose great experience must prove an invaluable capital when starting in this country, which is ten times as fertile and has ten times the natural advantages that the very best and most chosen districts of Australia or New Zealand can boast of.

By the mail just in we find the following startling news about the last Australian census, it will be certainly news for most of us here, and read in the light of our last years immigration returns will show how vastly this country is shooting ahead of Australia, spite of its being such a shut borough and so little known of it in England.

The Australasian, commenting on the Australian census, says:—

"Some curious and unexpected facts were brought out by the simultaneous enumeration ot the people in the Australian colonies; the most startling being this, that "in the ten years 1871 to 1881 over 101,000 persons, or about one in 18 of the average population of the four colonies, seem to have left the Australian continent unobserved." Unhappily for Victoria, she has been the chief sufferer in this respect, as our loss has been 67,437 during the period; and, worse than all, 55,204 of these were males. They were, there is every reason to believe, men in the prime of life, and full of that sort of energy which impels people to quit a country in which they are dissatisfied with their position and prospects, and to settle in one which offers a more promising sphere for their industry and enterprise.... There can be no doubt that Protection had a good deal to do with this exodus of our population.

THE BATTLE OF TEB.

We supplement the account given by the Central News' correspondent of the rout of Osman Digma's army, which we printed on Saturday, by some extracts from the reports of the encounter furnished by the correspondents of the morning papers, drawing chiefly on the Standard's correspondent:—

A FLAG OF TRUCE.

On Thursday afternoon Major Harvey, late of the Black Watch, a survivor of General Baker Pasha's disaster, rode two miles to a rising ground, where he planted a white flag with a letter attached to the staff enjoining the rebels to retire peaceably and allow us passage. The flag appeared to puzzle the enemy much, and was apparently regarded as a charm which might exert an evil influence. Lieutenant-Colonel Burnaby accompanied Major Harvey. The rebels maintained a continous fire at them, but after they had withdrawn, took the flag, presumably to read the letter. On Friday morning, as soon as it was light, Major Harvey rode to where he had left the flag. It had not been replaced, and the rebels fired and tried to cut him off, so he retired.

A GHASTLY SIGHT.

Our line of march coincided with the path of retreat of the 4th of February. Beginning near the fort, skeletons half covered with flesh dotted either side of the line of advance for miles. On the scene of the massacre of Baker's square it was strewn literally with hundreds, numbers of them in the most extraordinary attitudes, and with fleshless fingers clutching into the sand. Most of them lay on their faces, and showed one or more spear thrusts in the back, head, and neck. It was a hideous picture—those grinning, half-decomposed skeletons, in their position so significant of abject despair, and it would have horrified the most hardened against such sights.

FIRE OPENED BY THE ENEMY.

"A STORM OF BULLETS."

It was now ten o'clock, and we were nearing the enemy's line. The pipers of the Black Watch struck up a cheerful air enlivening the march of the column, and brightening the faces of the 42nd, who had hitherto been rather glum at finding themselves in rear of the square instead of in their favourite position, in front. The joke that as the Highlanders could not be in the front ranks they had determined to frighten away the enemy with their unearthly music ran round the square, and the column moved forward in a lighter spirit. The moment is an intensely exciting one, as every instant we expect to see the dark horde spring to their feet and charge down upon us. Suddenly the silence is broken by a hot fire of musketry, which spurts out from bush and earthworks, and the Krupp guns are also brought to play upon us. Several men in the square at once fall out from the ranks wounded; but the vast majority of the bullets whistle harmlessly overhead. An order is given, and the square inclines its course rather more to the right, thus taking us somewhat further from the face of the enemy's position, but still passing on so as to reach a point at which we shall command the enemy's rear. As we march we are pelted with a storm of bullets, while the shrapnel shell from the Krupp guns burst everhead with great accuracy, showing that the Tokar gunners know their business well. A bullet from one of these shells strikes down General Baker. He is badly wounded on the left cheek, but is soon again in the saddle, with his face bound up, ready for any service he may be called upon to perform. It is a hot time for all of us. Presently the square halts, and the men lie down in their ranks. The enemy are at this moment about eight hundred yards away, on our left and left rear. It is now the turn of the machine-guns and the seven-pounders of the camel battery, and they open fire upon the enemy. Six guns are at this time firing at us. At a little before noon our guns appear to get the mastery over those of the enemy. His fire slackens, and gradually dies out.

GENERAL GRAHAM GIVES THE ORDER TO ADVANCE.

The troops now begin to show signs of impatience. "If they won't attack us, why don't we attack them?" is the cry. A consultation is held between Generals Graham and Buller, and the order is given for a move. The men spring to their feet cheering, the bagpipes strike up again, and we march straight at the enemy's position. It is not a charge, but a steady, solid movement in the formation which has all along been observed. It looks, however, all the more formidable, for enthusiasm and discipline are equally marked, as the whole of the troops are cheering while the square sweeps down towards the enemy. The Arabs cease firing as we approach. They put aside their rifles and grasp their spears. Still they lie quiet until we are within a few yards of their wall; then they rush out and fling themselves straight at our bayonets. They deter the charge almost simultaneously on two sides of the square, and as from the change of direction, the flank of the square is now its front, the brunt of the onset falls on the Black Watch, the 65th and the Naval Brigade. The enemy do not come on in masses, but in groups of thirties and twenties, sometimes of threes and twos, sometimes alone. They dash forward against our ranks with poised spear; but not a man reaches the line of bayonets, for one and all are swept away before the terrible fire of musketry which breaks out as they rush forward. For a moment, on the other side of the square, the matter almost seems to be in doubt. So hotly do the Arabs press forward that the troops pause in their steady advance.

A HAND-TO-HAND ENCOUNTER.

It becomes a hand-to-hand fight, the soldiers meeting the Arab spear with the cold steel, their favourite weapon, and beating them at it. There is not much shouting, and only a short, sharp exclamation, a brief shout, or an oath, as the soldiers engage with their foes. At this critical moment, for the enemy are rushing up thickly, the Gardner guns open fire, and their leaden hail soon decides matters. At this instant Admiral Hewett, who, with Mr. Levison, his private secretary, is present as a spectator, joins the Naval Brigade, and leads them over the dead bodies of the Arabs, lying thickly strewn in their front, into the work, which proves to be but a bank of sand. Colonel Burnaby here has his horse shot under him, and a bullet passes through his arm. Still, with the double-barrelled fowling-piece he carries he knocks over the Arabs who assail him, killing ten with an expenditure of 20 cartridges. But they press on, and he is only saved from being speared by one of the Gordon Highlanders bayoneting an Arab who attacks him when both barrels of his gun are empty. Several fierce personal encounters take place as the troops rush into the entrenchments. The first feeling of nervousness has passed away, their blood is up now, and the enthusiasm of the battle is upon them. More and more shrill the pipes skirl out, and the men are eager to close with the foe. As single Arabs rush down, the brave soldiers step singly forward from the ranks to meet them, the bayonet to spear, in almost every instance vanquishing them by the bayonet alone, without firing.

Captain Wilson, of the Hecla, seeing a marine closely pressed, rushed to his assistance, and while surrounded by five or six of the enemy broke his sword at the hilt in the body of one of them. The others closing round him he tackled them with his fists, doing terrible havoc with his sword-hilt. He received a sword-cut through the helmet, cutting the scalp, but after having the wound dressed was at it again. Sharp as the fight was, it lasted but a minute or two after the troops had passed over the sand-bank. The work contained one Krupp gun, which, of course, fell into our hands. The enemy's position was really strong, and the enemy fought like fiends. One man for example, rushed upon the Highlanders after he had already received three bayonet wounds. Some of them close to the wells found their way inside the square, where they were bayoneted. Round an old rusty boiler, which must have found its way to Teb in Ismail Pasha's improving days, at least one hundred Arabs lay dead.

A portion of the entrenchments consisted of a number of deep large holes, or rifle-pits, in which side by side, and over the dead bodies, a great many had hidden themselves with the purpose to rush upon the square and cut their way inside it.

THE ENEMY STILL FULL OF FIGHT.

A halt was now called and endeavour made to reform the square, which had been somewhat broken in the fight; the side composed of the Irish Fusiliers and the rifles being now open, as the troops there had moved forward, so as to prolong the fighting line. The enemy had as yet no idea that they were beaten; they had lost one position, but were still full of fight. We were now right in rear of their main position around the wells of Teb. They fell to work and moved round two of the Krupp guns from its front face and opened a hot fire with these as well as with their musketry, and we replied with the captured Krupp gun and with the Gardners. The bush grows thickly all about where we were now formed up, and numbers of the enemy were lying concealed in it. These constantly leaped to their feet and rushed at us, singly or by twos and threes, with fanatical valour, often coming on till they fell dead almost at the muzzles of the rifles.

THE CAVALRY IN ACTION

Meantime, General Stuart, who had withdrawn his cavalry so as to allow free play for the infantry fire, was seen to be moving. About twelve o'clock he swung his force round the infantry right, and gave the order to gallop. Numbers of the enemy were visible in the plain beyond the ridge. The cavalry had been marching in three lines—Colonel Wood, with the 10th Hussars, forming the first; Lieutenant-Colonel Barrow, with the 19th Hussars, the second; and Lieut.-Colonel Webster, with the English horses of the 10th, 100 in number, the third. This formation was now maintained when the cavalry began to gallop. The enemy were seen at the sight of them splitting off into two large bodies, one to the right, the other to the left. It was a gallop of three good miles before any of the retreating soldiers were caught. The first was a woman, who, her sex unrecognizable, miraculously escaped unhurt through the first line, and being discerned and spared by the second, displayed her savage gratitude by firing a musket after the men who saved her. The enemy soon appeared in great force, some mounted, some on foot, all spearmen. Soon came the order to charge; this was about 12.40. On went Colonel Barrow, his squadrons as regular as if on parade, but he had a dangerous enemy to meet. Neither horsemen nor footmen showed the faintest vestige of fear or indecision. The men on foot lay in shelter of the hillocks and mounds of sand which, though small to the eye, were effective, and rising as the horses leapt over them or swerved aside, drove home their heavy spears throwing them when they were unable to reach their foe by hand. Some thirty Arab horsemen rode with full force and boldly against the whole advancing squadron, not a sign of trepidation anywhere among them. Three came safely straight through, and undismayed either by the shock they had survived or the equal peril imminent from the second line sweeping down upon them, wheeled their horses, which they were riding bare-backed, with wonderful rapidity, and actually hesitated not to hunt in full pursuit the squadrons whose superior power they had no narrowly escaped. I do not think they survived to boast of their prowess, but the tussle became a tough one and obscure in some of its details. Colonel Barrow was struck by a thrown spear that pierced his arm and side, entering, it is feared, the lung. Then the first line, missing its leader and not fully realizing the position, swept straight on where its lost leader no doubt would have wheeled it to the right. General Stuart, who was riding somewhat in advance of the left flank of the second line, noting at once the flaw, drove spurs into his horse, and with his staff galloped hard to bring round the erring squadrons. It was a race between this small band, the General and staff, and a cloud of the foe rushing from the right. The General won, and caught up his first line; but in this conflict, and under the unfaltering sweep of the 10th Hussars as they followed, wheeling with admirable precision to the left, the most mournful casualties of the day came. Of the General's four orderlies one was killed and two were wounded, but this was little. Major Slade, 10th Hussars, as fine a soldier and of as fine a family of soldiers as ever breathed, fell mortally wounded. His horse has since been found hamstrung, its rider close beside it pierced with seven spear wounds. Here, too, perished Lieutenant Probyn, 9th Bengal Cavalry, attached to the 10th, and Lieutenant Freeman, 19th Hussars. The enemy were now in full flight to the left; and since a pursuit of them would have brought the pursuers across an infantry file, the men of the leading line were dismounted to use their carbines. From twelve o'clock to two the cavalry had been riding backwards and forwards through the enemy, at the gallop for the greater part of the time.

GENERAL TOPICS.

Feb. 29th, 1884.

One is overburdened with materials, and yet there is nothing to write about by this mail. I feel like a navvy I have done such a lot of cutting. Amongst the rest you will find a whole page of odds and ends about "Argentines" and "Uruguays" &c. You will see that our friend the Consul-General for the last-named place has advised the English world that there will be an International Exhibition in Montevideo in 1885, and I can tell you that immediately on the Consul's letter appearing, applications came from all sides and people were referred to the Commission of Agriculture and Immigration in the Republic. Unifieds, you see, are quoted at 53 to 51, and have been congratulated on their debut by the great Times, which, on South American matters, is only a bigger fool than the rest of the English papers, and it will not be enlightened although it opens its columns snob-like to any local rubbish from an Auberon Herbert or to some one with a handle to his name.

Some of you gentlemen interested in frozen mutton may like to read the following letter from an evening paper:

"Sir,

"With reference to your table of a butcher's profit on retailing a sheep, I enclose a statement as amended by my wife's housekeeping book:—

"The butcher's profit is 11s., equal to 1½d. per lb., or 21½ per cent.

"If the above figures are correct (and I will vouch for them), who will say that the butcher's profit is not—well considerable?"

You will guess I have been reading American papers. So I have, and it still amazes one to see columns after columns devoted to railways, their doings and their petty swindles and strifes, as if the Goulds and the Vanderbilts were monarchs at war. I do not say that they are not of more consequence than present day monarchs in Europe, and one can envy young countries their subjects of interest; but it all seems to end in this sort of thing.

The New York Shipping List says: "Some handsome fortunes have been dropped in Wall-street in the past year. Some of these fortunes had been picked up in the street in former years; but there is little consolation to the losers in this fact. Money is money, if legally acquired; and its loss means a deprivation of many of life's enjoyments. The rich family who has to step down and out in view of more fortunate rivals is apt to think the loss of money a greater misfortune than uniform comparative poverty. Wall-street will not for years to come afford the opportunities it has at times offered during the past 20 years. For many months the public have taken little interest in stocks and bonds. Left to themselves the brokers can only fleece each other. The larger and shrewder or more lucky ones have driven many of the small fry out of the business. Some have retired permanently, and others are hanging about in the hope that something may turn up. A good many drones have been driven out of of the hive, and they will have to turn their attention to other business for a livehood."

What much the same sort of thing has come to in England is recounted by Lady John Manners in the National Review for March. It is too good to condense, and as your lady readers will be intensely interested in knowing how the aristocracy feed and what the ladies pay for their dresses—£1,000 is a usual annual expenditure—I send you full extracts to print separately. In regard to men's extravagancies surely Lady John Manners has been misinformed. She says:—"In a few instances the expenditure on cigars amounts to five pounds a day." That is 50 cigars at 2s. each, or 100 at 1s. or 200 at—well, no decent person smokes cigars at 6d.; but even 50 cigars a day, nearly one every quarter of an hour, is more than the Prince of Wales himself could get through.

You see I am "cutting it fine" this time, for now I have to refer you to "Beauty and the Peer, or the true story of Miss Fortescue and Viscount Garmoyle, by one who knows"—taken from the Evening News. It is a very sad tale, and if it be true that Lord Garmoyle has jilted the poor girl to take up with Miss Broughton, another beauty of the London boards, he deserves to be morally impaled. The account I send you is taken from an out-and-out Tory paper. The uncomplimentary way in which Earl Cairns and the Countess are spoken of, is all the more extraordinary. I happened to look over the shoulder of a friend who was, I am ashamed to say, reading the last number of Town Talk, and I saw that in the "fine woman" competition in which that publication offers £25 to the receiver of the largest number of votes, Miss Fortescue was comparatively low in the list, and defeated by Kate Vaughan, Miss Anderson, the two Broughtons and heaps of other girls on and off the stage. Nevertheless, when I tell you that the Duchess of Teck headed the poll, you will understand that the clients of the not-to-be-again-mentioned publication consider quantity as well as quality in their estimate of what constitutes a "fine woman."

BEAUTY AND THE PEER;

OR,

THE TRUE STORY OF MISS FORTESCUE AND VISCOUNT GARMOYLE.

(By One who knows.)

The public have a commendable curiosity in matters of courtship and marriage, and this curiosity is not dulled when the courtship terminates in a suit for breach of promise, when, moreover, the lady is a beauty and the perfidious lover a peer. Everybody knows the pretty fiction—"Beauty and the Beast." We propose to give our reader a narrative of facts not at all pretty, but true, which we have called "Beauty and the Peer."

Beauty in this case had golden hair and a taking face, and played the part of Celia in the Fairyland on the boards of the Savoy. The Peer was a young man whose taste in the "mud-honey," of which Mr Tennyson sings, was undeniable—a taste, it must be confessed, not altogether banished from the aristocratic section of society.

This Peer somehow or other wandered from the gaiety of demi-mondish drawing-rooms into eye-shot of the demure little Fairyland of "Iolanthe." He came, he saw the golden hair and charming face of Beauty breaking like a modern Venus from a sea of creamy silk, but he did not immediately conquer. This golden-haired darling—so he called Beauty in a letter to which we shall again refer—would be, he thought, delicious; and since she was one of those who, being on the boards, were regarded by the Peer's blue-blooded relatives as so much dirt, no doubt she would feel honoured by his notice. Beauty, however, had other admirers, and was not, as he had anticipated, like a ripe pear ready to drop into his aristocratic mouth. The Peer accordingly waxed warm in pursuit; and at last, moved by his evident devotion and confiding in his fidelity, Beauty yielded, gave up an untitled lover, and the courtship of the Peer began. With hereditary perseverance if not with hereditary caution, he pressed his suit. His perseverance was rewarded. The prize was almost won, Beauty had consented to become the bride of the Peer.

But there was one obstacle to their union. The Peer had parents. How could they brook this mixture of their ancient blood with the common red fluid which in Beauty's cheeks looked to youthful eyes so fair? Wonderful to relate, the noble Earl, his father, and the Countess, his mother, merely stipulated for a year's delay, which, as the Peer was going to Sandhurst, was seemingly very reasonable. And then her lover's parents received their son's fiancée with parental kindness and cordiality. They even went the length of regretting that they could not, owing to religious scruples, see her last appearance in "Iolanthe" before she retired to the aristocratic leisure befitting a Viscount's bride! She had never expected this, nor was she alone in her surprise. Stormy and relentless opposition had been predicted by her best friends, not only because of the mésalliance which Beauty would be in point of birth, but also because to the stern Presbyterian view an actress seems little better than the scarlet lady of Babylon. She was surprised, delighted; it was almost too good to be true. But the Earl had his own opinions about the course to adopt in such a juncture; and, as the event proved, he admirably forecast the future. The year's delay gave, what was of paramount importance, time. In a year a thousand things might happen. For instance, a young man's fancy might change, he might—there was in this point special hope—get tired of sweetness which was already won. The poet assures us for "a month or twain to live on honeycomb is pleasant," but the young Peer's liking for sweets was to endure the hard test of twelve months' delay. In short, the Earl knew his son's disposition. The mere fact of the prohibition might once more make "the gross mud-honey of town," to repeat Mr. Tennyson's phrase, more attractive than the virgin honey of the domestic hive. Accordingly, every opportunity was given to the young people to be together, and every effort was made to remove any shadow of prohibition, for, with the Peer's fancy, prohibition was the bloom of the peach; it was a maxim he loyally acted on, that forbidden fruit is sweet.

The Earl reasoned well. All turned out as he anticipated. Still it may be doubted if the knowledge of human nature and diplomacy possessed by an ex-Lord Chancellor ought, in common fairness, not to speak of generosity, to be matched against the confiding innocence of a girl.

Meanwhile Beauty, not seeing below the surface, was completely off her guard. She would have felt it treason to think of the venerable Earl and the Countess as other than her new parents. And so, fearless of the future, she basked in the sunshine of an aristocratic courtship. It was very pleasant to have a titled lover assiduous at her side. It was very pleasant too, it must be confessed, to go to Garrard's with her Viscount and look at the coronet and initials on the wedding presents. It was very pleasant to get affectionate letters from the Countess and to find that "the dear boy's" future was in her hands, that her sweet influence was depended upon by his parents to get him to return to Sandhurst, to do this or that, because they knew that by any one else he was unmanagable. In short, Beauty having shaped an unruly young rake into a harmless spoon, was entreated to continue the good work, and persuade him to scoop up some of the good things his fond parents had in vain put in his way while he was yet a rake and preferred to grope in the gutter.

But we must hasten over the halcyon days of prosperous courtship. Only let our readers be sure that the Peer, in his new capacity of spoon, acquitted himself very creditably. As long as Beauty frequented the Fairyland of the Savoy Theatre, her spoon was constant in attendance, and the dressing-rooms of the gentlemen he knew behind the scenes were, owing to their well-tried good nature, almost as much his property as theirs. Pass quickly over the swiftly gliding weeks of courtship after Beauty has left the boards. Beauty naturally thinks she has found in the venerable Earl a father. All goes on smoothly, and is couleur de rose.

And now, at last, we find Beauty and her mother at Brighton. The Peer is with them, as attentive and devoted as ever. With difficulty he quits his fiancée's side. But the separation is to be a short one. He is to return tomorrow to escort Beauty to the ancestral tower of Bournemouth, his home and her's.

And here I can imagine my fair readers saying, to themselves, "How delightful!" and fancying themselves very pleasantly in her place.

The fiancée of a Viscount, received with open arms by his family, made much of and admired by everybody, busied in all those preparations that keep up the sweet glow of expectation as the wedding draws near—who more fortunate, who more happy than Beauty? And now, while she counts the hours before she will be again with her lover, a letter arrives. It is from him! To literally transcribe it is unnecessary. Suffice it to say that the Peer, actually the day after their tender parting, writes to say that it would be better to give up the match, that his people object to it—why now, of all times?—that his titled friends would not call upon her, and with this he furnishes a list creditable rather to his imagination than his veracity. Then he goes on to entreat her not to do anything hastily, but to go to his solicitors, and she will find they have instructions to make an arrangement that will completely satisfy her.

And to injury the noble youth adds what is nothing short of insult. He hopes that "though they cannot marry, they will always be the dearest friends, and that his golden-haired darling will be his darling still." Needless to say, the days of the Peer's spoondom are over; whatever effected the change—it may be a plunge into his former pursuits—the rake is a rake once more.

Beauty, when, after a long interval, she is able to realise the meaning of this singular production, sorrowfully sends the Peer's letter to her new father, and, with touching innocence, asks if he knows of this.

The answer comes; but just as without any cause on her part her betrothed has deserted her, so now her betrothed's father writes, but there is nothing fatherly or even sympathetic in his tone. No diplomatist who finds it assists his diplomacy to make a warm show of friendship freezes more quickly when his object is attained than does this astute and legal-minded Earl now that he has got the key of the position. The Earl (he writes) is astonished at her conduct. To send a son's letter to his father under such circumstances; she asks his opinion, she can have it, "he does quite approve of the course his son has taken."

And so the Peer's parents, instead of being ashamed of their son's conduct, approved of it. Nay, the news of his perfidy is greeted by the whole family with sober Calvinistic joy. A daughter of Heth would have been a sore trouble in such a household. Nevertheless, the Peer, since, as it need hardly be said, he has the sagest of legal advisers, thinks it well to endeavour to atone for the desertion he has perpetrated. His method of atonement is singular and characteristic. Under the naive impression that money is a quid pro quo for anything—whether outraged affections or insulted womanhood—he offers first £3,000 and then £5,000, and wonders that his offers are indignantly rejected.

Womanly dignity and feeling are not, as the legal mind may suppose, a mere affair of commerce. Beauty has turned for advice to old friends of her childhood, and urged by them is determined to bring before the tribunal of the English people the circumstances of the case; a necessary step, since canards of various manufacture come thick in the weekly flights of the journals of society.

This is the simple outline of the circumstances which have led to the suit for breach of promise of marriage brought by Miss Finney, better known by her nom de théatre as Miss Fortescue, against Viscount Garmoyle, the eldest son of Earl Cairns, ex-Lord Chancellor of England.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

Amicis has arrived as Montevideo, and the poor man may well exclaim, "Save me from my friends!" It now appears that it was his wish to be spared all the mobbing and lionising he is now undergoing, and that he wrote out to that effect. His admirers would have honoured him more by acceding to his wish than by their present pranks. A telegram from the Mount says that the whole city there is "off its head" about the poet, and there has been a row between the innumerable reception Committees. We welcome Mr. Amicis to the Plate, and hope that his friends wont kill him with kindness, which they seem determined to do.

The Orenoque brings a little later news than the Aconcagua. Great anxiety reigned in London, owing to the Dynamiters having announced another explosion for St. Patrick's Day. The Paris and Vienna police are aiding their London confreres to run down the criminals, and the whole United States Press is loud in denouncing the explosions. The French have bad news from Tonkin. The fall of Bacninh has not cowed the Black Flags, who still hold out and give no quarter to Europeans. The expedition, also, is costing France enormous sums.

There is a good deal of fun and business on the cards for to-day—races at Palermo, elections, inauguration of the public schools, etc., etc. We hope the Clerk of the Weather will be in better humour than he was last Tuesday.

Part of the details of the battle of Teb will be found in another column. The Arabs fought like devils, but British cold steel was too much for them. We lost some excellent officers amongst the killed. Baker Pacha got two bullets in his jaw, but bound it up and fought all day, as if the wounds were pin-scratches. The defeat has demoralised the tribes; and as Chinese Gordon has completely won the Mahdi's heart by making him Sultan of Kordofan (which title gives him the inestimable privilege of doubling the number of his wives) the whole row is probably near its end by this time.

Banda Oriental is ahead of us again. An International Exhibition is announced to be held in Montevideo next year, and there is a rush in London to join the Show. It is to be hoped, at least, that this country will put its best leg foremost on the occasion, and take its proper place in the first International Exhibition ever held in the River Plate. If that one-horse Continental affair in Plaza Once had been properly handled, it would have been International, and this country would have had the honour of leading the way; but, somehow, the Orientales have more go in them, and often beat us in the race, although we ought to be able to give them any weight and yet beat them in a canter.

The old pontoon Vanguardia is to be put up for auction. She won't fetch much, as she is past repairing.

The Nord America has shown in her trip out this time how she can skim the dark blue sea. She made the run from "the Rock" to Montevideo in thirteen days! This is faster than most railway trains in the Plate.

It will scarcely be believed possible, but the evening papers of yesterday stated that Colonel Bedoya, who fought a kind of duel a week ago, and was arrested for so doing, had another on hand for yesterday. This sort of flying in the face of both the law and the regulations of the army will be fatal to the service, if not stamped out vigorously.

A barbarous murder in connection with the election to-day is reported from Ranchos. The victim was a local trader.

We call attention to the carelessness, recklessness and heedlessness of the guards and dsivers on the Argentine and Lacrosse tramway lines. Only a few days ago, on one of our particularly moist days, there was a race from the station to Calle Callao, between an Argentine and Lacrosse car. As the cars were open and the urtains up, the passengers received che contents of most of the muddy puddles that are peculiar to Rivadavia, Many requested the guard to lower the front curtain, but he only replied with a laugh. We earnestly call the attention of the respective managers or administrations to the matter, whith is one that, perhaps, may not brook repetition.

It is said that Dr Rufino Elizalde will be the new member of the Supreme Court, vice Dr Pizarro.

It is said that the Provincial Government House in Calle Moreno will be turned into offices for the Western Railway Administration, and the Legislature into the Public Mountain of Piety (Anglice "My Uncle's")

Mr. George Vallee, the Bianconi of the Plate, has started a diligence from Nueve de Julio to Fort Victorica. This will open up a big bit of Pampa and give a spurt to prices of land on the old line of frontier.

The poet D'Amicis did not like his first experience of the Plate. He had hardly landed at Montevideo when some one in the Comandancia de Marina offered him a "maté." The poet burned his lips and looked as if he had swallowed a table-spoonful of Castor Oil, handing back the nauseous beverage, amidst the tittering of the bye-standers.

There was a smash on the Western Railway on Thursday, caused by the storm, which blew five trucks full of bricks into a passenger train. The trucks and several cars were smashed, but strange to say, nobody was hurt. The passengers were wet to the skin, and had to sleep all night in the smashed cars.

Another political murder is reported, in Catamarca, the murderer being a Lieutenant of Police.

Tomas Drysdale y Co.

Dear Sirs,

I have much pleasure in stating that I cured all my flocks this season with the "Golden Leaf Extract" and found the result highly satisfactory, and in future do not intend to use any other dip.

After first using the "Golden Leaf," I found it such a perfect cure for Scab that I recommended it to several of my neighbours who have all proved it equally good.

Yours truly
W. R. GRANT.

HENNESSY

IMPORTANT NOTICE—Every bottle of our imports of these brands bears our Red and White label.

Parry & Co.

Beg to caution the public that the Trade Marks of many of the Firms they represent are Pirated, and by this means Spurious and Worthless goods are foisted on purchasers, instead of the Genuine articles.
The Sham labels are wonderfully well got up to fulfil their nefarious mission.
Some of them bear a forgery of manufacturer's signature, others have apocryphal signatures, one or two letters being altered in so artistic a manner as almost to defy detection. Whilst many bear No Name whatever, but in general appearance closely resemble authentic labels.
We are determined to spare no efforts with a view to stopping the nefarious and dishonest practice of RE-FILLING EMPTIES, which is carried on to a shameless extent. This not only ruins the reputation of articles which are nutritious and conducive to good health, but the adulterated and unwholesome substitute poison the blood and develope disease in those who consume them.
The following are some of the most notable instances in which this audacious swindle is commonly perpetrated, viz:—

TEAS

Those who re-fill with inferior mixtures the empty boxes bearing our registered brands of FINE TEAS, do so generally at the bottom, leaving the lid and top lead intact, so as the more readily to deceive purchasers.

Stout, Ale, Brandies, Hollands, Angostura, Lea & Perrins' Sauce, Clarets, Ports, Sherries, Schnapps, Whisky, Rum, Old Tom, &c.

Very many who despatch drinks by the glass buy the genuine articles, and after using the contents of one or two bottles (leaving the remainder of their purchase on the shelf for adornment and to induce the belief that they deal in first class goods) re-fill them as required with CHEAP, and often, obnoxious substitutes.
There are others WHO MAKE A TRADE of collecting empty bottles and cases of the articles enumerated, which are then used for putting up spurious and deleterious mixtures to be foisted on the public as legitimate productions.
We are at all times ready to give information to dealers who may be in doubt as to the legitimacy of any article purporting to be the product of any of the manufacturers whose attorneys we are, and whose Trade Marks we have registered.

ON 'CHANGE.

March 29th, 1884

Cedulas A	100
Cedulas B	100¾
Cedulas E	88½
Cedulas F	83¾
National Bank Shares	128½

The great news on 'Change this morning was another telegram from London giving the following:—
Argentine loan launched 1½ million sterling by Baring Bros., £1,685,000 subscribed, 84½-85 going up.
Although this news was not posted on the Bolsa, still it was well known in certain circles. National Bank Shares ruled firm at 128¾, and Cedulas also at 88¾. Still there was not a large business transacted in the presence of such excellent good news, and the bear interest, which is very strong on the Bolsa, tries to throw doubt on the telegram.
Cedulas Series B was sold to-day at ¼ prem.; this is an 8 o/o stock and not often offered on 'Change. One large lot of Series E was sold to-day, 200,000, and at once bought by the Cedula King, who, according to general report, holds ample funds to take up all the stock he has bought for the end of the month. Series F rules comparatively speaking firm at 83¾. But spite of the very strong appearance of the share market at the ring immediately after the ringing of the bell a leading broker offered to sell at 128¾ and could find no buyer, which seems most strange.
There seems to be no doubt whatever that the Minho passenger on Flores Island is suffering from an attack of yellow fever, at least so the telegrams from the Montevidean Board of Health announce, and hence the term of quarantine for the Minho's passengers in port has not yet been determined, which is a great inconvenience; it would have been much better for the passengers had they landed in Montevideo when her quarantine down there had expired.
The following were the sales at the ring during official hours:—
Cedulas—
For cash B 4,500 at 100¼
For cash E 8,100 at 88¼-⅜
For March, 31st E 266,000 at 88¾-⅞
For April 30th E 30,000 at 88¾
For cash F 18,000 at 83-¼
For March 31st F 7,000 at 83¼
Sales, 333,600
National Bank Shares—
For March 31st 1,500 at 128¼
For April 30th 1,050 at 129¾-130-129¾
Sales, 2,550
National Bonds, 1882—
For cash 4,500 at 80
Telegrams were received, dated yesterday, from Paris, announcing that the National Bank loan has been successfully placed. To-day the news was confirmed.
The arrival of the Nord America was the talk of the whole Bolsa; 13 days from Gibraltar beats everything hitherto known in the steam line between Europe and the R. Plate. She brings:—
20 first-class passengers
25 second-class ditto
340 third-class ditto
1,054 tons of cargo.
Speed maximum 412 knots, minimum 400 knots; mails come up to-night. She will leave this port for Gibraltar, Marseilles and Genoa direct on 7th April without fail, and already she has a large first-class list of passengers engaged. The Italians have by this remarkably fast steamer taken the lead of us all in the matter of steam navigation as in many other matters in the R. Plate also.
Mr. J. A. Bennet, who is so well and favorably known in business circles in this city, took leave of his friends on 'Change and starts this evening for Montevideo to catch the Pacific steamer to Rio and from thence to sail for New York in one of the Roach Line of steamers. It is hardly five years since Mr. Bennet started business in this city, yet in that short time he has established a trade in many articles of American import rivalling the business of some of our oldest houses. We wish him a pleasant trip to his native country and hope to see him soon back again in the R. Plate.
The sale of the estancia near Pilar, 1½ leagues of camp, for 1,800,000 $, wire fenced with estancia house, montes, puestos, &c., is about the greatest bargain we have heard for a long time. Messrs. Roca & Sanchez are the buyers. We congratulate them on their purchase, as they have secured an 'invernada' for cattle for the city market of very great value, and not every day to be met with.
Mr. Ghiraldez, the leading real estate broker, has purchased during the week various city properties of the Pacheco testamentaria amounting to over 30,000 m/n.
Mr. Alfred Lumb, Argentine Consul General in London, is on his way out to the River Plate, having sailed from England on 6th inst.
Another great fraud in London is announced in the London papers of 6th March. We hold details for our next.
It was rumoured on 'Change that the Minho will not be out of quarantine before 8th April, which is a very long time for the passengers on board.
The following are the Insurance Companies that lose by the Gualeguaychu mill fire:—

London & Lancashire	25,000 m/n
Queen	25,000
Northern	20,000
Estrella	20,000
London Assurance	20,000
North British Mercantil	30,000
Transatlantic	40,000
Guardian	25,000
Netherland	7,000
Hamburg	20,000

The loss is estimated at 300,000 m/n. This is about the heaviest business for our Insurance Companies that we can remember.
The sale of the great house property in the Plaza Victoria, Recoba nueva, belonging to Sr Diaz Caveda is reported, a very large property all built on, house of altos with cellars shops, &c., the property was divided into two houses one sold for 1,150,000 m/c and the other 900,000 m/c the dimensions are said to be 18x70 a little over 1,600 m/c per varacuadrada which for property in the Plaza Victoria appears to us most extremely cheap.
Another piece of good news for the frozen mutton business. The R.M.S. Tagus, as we announced a month ago took home a consignment of 300 frozen capones, placed on board the steamer alive by Mr Evans of Montevideo, the mutton proved a brilliant success, was landed in splendid condition and sold in London like bread and cheese. All the Royal Mail steamers will now have freezing chambers on board and every trip will take 300 carcases to England. Soon we shall have more doing in this market in mutton than in wool, but the consumption of mutton in this country is enormous we estimate it at 12 millions capones per annum.
Mr Casallares, agrimensor, will leave on 1st April in Pomona for Patagones to conclude the surveys of the camps down there and on his return the titles will be given.
As will be seen, in our advertising columns, Mr. Alejo Amespil has been appointed general agent for the firm of Messrs. Pereira de Faria & Co., in Buenos A

EDITOR'S TABLE

The oldest citizens of La Plata say that the storm the other night was the worst ever experienced there. It must have been bad, as one man had his coat blown clean off; in the pockets were several letters and a portrait of his lady-love. The coat has been found, but the owner has not turned up.

The suspected case of yellow fever at Flores Island turns ont to be a genuine one, and the R.M.S. Minho will, in consequence, have to remain ten days in quarantine. The sick person is a third-class passenger who embarked at Rio.

The Frozen Mutton business is taking hold of the commercial mind. It appears that a private firm here shipped over three hundred 'capones' to England by the R.M.S. Tagus, on her last trip home, and they were all sold at a slashing profit.

The news that John Anchorena had invested in ten millions worth of fencing wire turns out to be what the French call a 'duck'—and a duck without a grain of truth in its composition.

The public is cautioned against a quack specific for the eyes, advertised as Agua Milagrosa de Santa Lucia. Mr. Puiggari, the city chemist, declares it to be a miserable swindle, unworthy of St. Lucy or any other Saint in the Calendar.

There is a proposal from private parties to rent the Capital Lottery from the Municipality for 30,000 Nats. a month. The idea is to increase the drawings, and, no doubt, this would give the speculators a handsome profit. The price they offer, however, is by no means high enough. Better for the Municipality to keep the Lottery in its own hands. The public have no confidence in private Lottery 'empresas.'

Madame Fonseca has generously offered the Damas de Beneficencia a plot of ground on which to build the Drysdale School for the Blind; but it has been declined with thanks, as being too far outside the paved part of the city.

The musical world of the city is preparing for another treat from the German Singing Academy to-morrow night. The programme is especially good, and one hundrod of our best singers and instrumentalists will take part in it. We are asked to remind them that a general rehearsal takes place to-day (Sunday) at 11 a.m.

We perceive by advertizement in another column that Miss Colclough has removed her well-known Colegio Griego from Calle Suipacha to No. 671 Calle Parana, between Arenales and Juncal, and, no doubt, her numerous pupils will be glad to follow her there, as she is deservedly a great favourite with all under her charge.

The financial year closes in the National Government house to-morrow, and the rush of Jews and Gentiles to get their little bills settled is a caution to creditors. The poor clerks are worked to death, and sigh for the 1st April to come.

Estancieros said yesterday that there has been enough rain for the present; one of our largest proprietors thinks there has been too much. The news from the camp reports the pasturage looking greener and better every day.

Here's the theatrical programme for the coming season now so close at hand:—Italian opera in the Colon; "Our Dan" in the Nacional; French opera in the Opera House; La Preziosi in the Politeama; French opera bouffe in the Variedades, and a Spanish Zarzuela company in the Alegria. We hope there wont be a blaze in any of them. With all the talk and fuss, nothing whatever has yet been done to save the public from being burned alive in one of or all our theatres.

We take the following from Truth

"Mr. Wouldsworth of Colbuess, has decided to sell his valuable stud of Clydesdale and half-bred horses in consequence of his having let the Home Farm. The Clydesdals are a particularly choice lot, and include a noted sire, Baron Renfrew, and among the horses are representatives of all the best strains. No doubt, most of the stud will go across the Atlantic, as there is a great demand for pedigree Clydesdales both in the United States and in Canada.

"Encore les Tramvays!" A morning colleague draws a curt but feeling picture of the delights of tramway travelling in this city—driver hopelessly drunk, guard in a fume because he was six minutes late; horses whole starved and barely able to pull an ounce.

M. Sabathè, the well-known merchant in Calle Maipu, has pocketed the 10,000 Nats. prize of the last Mendoza Lottery.

The American papers announce that Lord Aylesford has purchased a large bar-room at Big Springs, Texas, and they predict that it will be a profitable speculation "to own a lordly saloon."
